

THE BRITISH ATHLETES COMMISSION LIMITED

BAC Benefits Scheme: Independent Financial Advice

The British Athletes Commission (BAC) have teamed up with two firms of independent financial advisers (IFAs) to enable athletes to plan their finances as professionally as they plan their sporting careers

How have the BAC helped?

Trying to choose an independent financial adviser can be a daunting prospect for anyone, yet it is vitally important that athletes get good advice and help with planning their finances to ensure they are on a sound footing when they make the transition to a life after sport.

The BAC is aiming to make it easier for athletes to find a suitable IFA by putting together a network of advisers who understand athletes, and are prepared to give advice and guidance at a time when many athletes are not earning huge sums of money, but need help in preparing a financial plan. They are all able to provide a wide range of financial advice, and should be able to deal with any questions. For full details of all the companies in the network, please go to the advice section of the BAC website and click on finance. Here you will also find some basic advice on how to look after your finances, and an income v expenditure calculator to get you started.

The Financial advice Offer

Each of the IFA firms we work with have their own specific deals available to athletes, for full details of their offers, please see the Benefits section of the BAC website. However, to ensure that each athlete receives a great service whoever they go to, each IFA firm has agreed that they will carry out an initial consultation and financial report followed up by an annual review for free! for all BAC members who are current athletes. There are also great deals available for Alumni (retired) athletes, again, full details are on the BAC website.
